SHELTER | HOMES FOR SALE

Home of the Week: This London Penthouse Took 13 Years to Build. Now It Can Be Yours for $55 Million.

After dropping $1.3 billion on the land over a decade ago, the developer has finally unveiled the new neighborhood's first penthouse.

BY HELENA MADDEN ON FEBRUARY 18, 2020

Rome wasn't built in a day and all that, but London's Chelsea Barracks really took its sweet time. After nearly thirteen years, the development's first penthouse has finally listed for $55 million.

Located atop the Nine Whistler Square building, the two-story residence's lofty asking makes it among the city's priciest penthouses. The 6,144-square-foot interior was designed by Lawson Robb in a modern-meets-Georgian style that mirrors the building's architecture and that of the surrounding neighborhood. Cabinets and floors are solid oak; marble, finished by Italian stone artisans, is used for the stairwell and the kitchen; and the bronze balustrades on the balcony are bespoke designs inspired by the botanical prints of textile designer William Morris. The six-bed, seven-bath home also has an impressive, 2,907-square-foot, wrap-around terrace, with panoramic views of the city.

A close-up, low-angle shot of a person's hands and torso in a workshop. The person is wearing a blue denim shirt and a brown leather apron. The apron has a small rectangular label on the front that reads "BORZALINO" in a serif font, with "MADE IN ITALY" written in smaller letters below it. The person is holding a large, flat piece of brown leather, which is the focus of their work. The background is slightly blurred, showing what appears to be a workshop environment with various tools and equipment. The lighting is warm and focused on the person's hands and the leather.

Thank you all
